INTERNATIONAL WEBINAR

INTERNET AND CHILDREN

The Internet is an increasing part of today's culture, especially for children and youth, for whom schoolwork, online gaming, and social networking are among the most popular activities. However, the lack of common agreement about the right approach to educating and protecting children adds further challenges to a child's online experience and expression. It appears that getting agreement on what defines a person as a child is one of the largest obstacles to achieving effective child protection. Children's ability to access the Internet has grown rapidly, and most young people frequently access the Internet. The purpose of this webinar is to have a discourse on how to motivate young minds use the content available on internet in their daily life along with their studies for a positive outcome.
